Community Corrections e-Learning Collaborative

Logistics: Each course is two weeks long and is facilitated by expert trainers. The courses allow you to work at times that best suit your schedule, 24/7; you don't have to be online at a specific time. Classes have 20 or fewer students to foster collaborative learning. You will spend 60 to 90 minutes a day on the course and participate from any computer or laptop, (home or work) which has a 56K modem and Internet access.

Certificates of Completion for 16 hours will be awarded by NLECTC and CCELC/TEC.

Sponsors: National Law Enforcement & Corrections Technology Center – Rocky Mountain Region (NLECTC), CCELC and The Education Coalition (TEC). Courses are based on the successful pilot project funded/sponsored by NLECTC and TEC.

Orientation to Online Learning: A short course is required for new students to familiarize them with the technology and facilitated learning.

Tuition Fees: Tuition (includes all course materials) can be paid by an agency purchase order/check or personal check; one must be received to provide course access. Tuition fees are non-refundable but can be transferred to another course or student if course space exists. The individual or training director paying tuition must authorize the transfer. Tuition can only be transferred to courses within this offering. Purchase orders and checks are accepted.

Online Learners' Orientation

For students who are new to CCELC online learning, a short orientation is required to ensure that they became familiar with the technology, learning environment, facilitated learning, syllabus and other components. Depending on the students' technology expertise, they spend fifteen minutes to one hour a day for several days.

Family Dynamics & Domestic Violence

Focuses on working with and engaging families when working with adolescents or individuals, supervising the abuser, with discussions about families and adolescents from a strength-based perspective. Students examine complex cases of domestic violence and relationship dynamics.

Individual & Group Cognitive-Behavioral Approaches

Focuses on CB approaches as a tool to assess and intervene in the lives of clients. Many participants are exposed to cognitive behavior approaches in their work. This course helps them enhance their work by providing language for CB approaches. Community correction administrators, managers, program designers, officers and resource staff will benefit from this course.

Introduction to the Supervision of Sex Offenders

Sex offenders hurt more people than just the victim. Society's ambivalence toward sex makes treating sex offenders more difficult. The course summarizes knowledge about sex offenders and victims, articulates treatment components, identifies containment model parameters, describes differences between specialized and traditional supervision.

Motivational Interviewing

MI helps people change problem behaviors. It is a direct, client-centered counseling approach to promote change by helping clients explore and resolve ambivalence. MI provides a toolbox of approaches to help clients recognize and do something about present or potential problems. It is particularly useful to motivate people who are reluctant or ambivalent about personal change. Topics include the Stages of Change Model.

Officer Safety in the Community

As the law enforcement component in community corrections has expanded, so has the need to ensure that officers and their supervisors learn appropriate ways to protect themselves in offices, streets and home visits. No other training is more important,

Online Facilitators' Orientation (by special arrangement)

Trainers learn how to facilitate online courses. The course provides instruction in collaborative learning, facilitating, identifying and teaching to multiple intelligences and learning styles, fostering collaborative learning, facilitating online discussions, using the learning management system, working in a mediated environment, and other topics.
